SATURDAY 15 January 2022

10.30 – 12.30 FANEL 1: 'Rich and poor'. Regional inequalities and their socio-economic consequences

The growing inequalities at the global level have impacted Eastern and South-Eastern Europe as well, resulting in expanding socio-economic gaps at national and regional levels, an increase in Euroscepticism, raising illiberal trends and an assault on human rights. With a continuing trend of brain drain, corruption and weak institutions, the countries in this macro-region need to address the current shift towards a new model of development, towards a more sustainable, green and digital economy. The current disruptions of value chains coupled with the technological evolution have a greater impact on less developed economies, thus raising questions about the broader regional effects, and the social contract between the individuals and states.

10.30 – 10.50 Setting the stage for the discussions

Keynote Speaker: Mrs. Paloma Gonzalez, Deputy Political Counselor, U.S. Embassy in Bucharest

Host and Moderator: Ana-Maria Anghelescu, Deputy Project Manager ESEE Fanel Network

13.30 – 15.00 FANEL 2: Established and new regional cooperation formats and initiatives inside and outside the European Union

The end of the Cold War resulted in the proliferation of regional cooperation, addressing common issues. In Europe, where the states were facing transitions from centralized systems to democracy and market economies, these regional cooperation frameworks were established by former candidate countries (e.g. the Central European Initiative or the Visegrád Group), with the goal of preparing the EU accession and were persevered as platforms for political dialogue and partnerships. The international community supported a variety of sub-regional cooperation formats in the Balkans, as a way to pacify and support reconstruction efforts as a result of the war in the 1990s. Furthermore, since the launch of the European Neighbourhood Policy, numerous regional and sub-regional initiatives of multilateral cooperation have flourished. Some of these aim at further linking the regions with the European Union, such as the case of the EU Eastern Partnership, the Open Balkan Initiative or even the rebranded Community of Democratic Choice. On the other hand, Russia and China promoted their own regional cooperation initiatives, such as the Eurasian Economic Union or the 16+1 (previously, for a brief period, 17+1) framework with Central and Eastern Europe and the Belt and Road Initiative.

15.30 – 17.30 FANEL 3: International games in the region. Competing interests in ESEE and their consequences

Last year's unprecedented events, especially the pandemic and the natural disasters in Europe, Australia, Eurasia etc., have underlined the urgent need for more cooperation, democracy, inclusiveness and transparency and less competition between the major powers. Although there is noticeable progress in cooperation, competition is currently still dominant. As a result of globalization, the fast-paced world is experiencing not only a pandemic, but an infodemia also. As information travels very rapidly, the illiberal trends and fake news took over the region, where the competition for power prevails. In order to better cope with present and future crises, resilient societies and strong institutions are needed.
